United Supermarkets Will Not Sell August Issue of Rolling Stone Magazine

(LUBBOCK, Texas) – United Supermarkets, LLC, announced today it will not sell the controversial August issue of Rolling Stone magazine in any of its stores.

The issue, which is scheduled to be released publicly on Friday, features Boston Marathon bombing suspect Dzhokhar Tsarnaev on the cover.

“This was an easy business decision for us,” said Robert Taylor, CEO of United Supermarkets, LLC. “To do anything that would glorify terrorist behavior simply goes against what our company stands for.”

Many other retailers nationwide have taken similar action in choosing not to sell the magazine.

Taylor added that Rolling Stone is only available at a limited number of United Supermarkets, Market Street, Amigos and United Express locations.
